You are invited to attend our conference:

“Growth models in the disruption age. The future of financial services”

Tuesday 10 April 2018, 17:00 - 18:00

Yellow 1 room

Description

The financial sector is at the beginning of a new digital age: in a world where data has become the new currency of exchange, the activities supported by intelligence will change the way in which institutions will try to achieve their investment objectives and to manage the needs related to risk management. In all this, digitization remains a priority to meet the challenge of growth, as it offers the potential to streamline operations, create efficiency and optimize performance and risk management.

In this session Riccardo Lamanna, Branch Head of State Street in Italy, will present the research A New Climate for Growth: Cultivating Asset Intelligence to Thrive, conducted on the occasion of the Bank’s 225th anniversary. The report outlines a new model for the growth of industry players, identifying some areas to which institutions must prioritize: compete on a large scale, align technology with its ambitions and develop the potential of asset intelligence.

A discussion of trends and the future of Fintech will follow with the participation of international experts moderated by Maurizio Melis, journalist of Radio24
